

Await the Night

Serena Choo

I enter the land of dreams
As you sing me to sleep
When finally my weary feet
Lie entangled in sheets

I fall into misty fields
And I struggle to see
The world that my mind's conceived
From my stored memories

Rising from the mist is a mountainside
Its snowy summit scrapes the sky
It scrapes the sky
And I
And I
Must begin the hike

I climb hearing distant screams
Of the nightmares that seek
To capture my mind and feed
On the hopes they can reach

Sparse light struggles through the trees
From the snow covered peak
And though I am sure to freeze
I forge on through the trees

And
Run toward the sunlight that paints the sky
And I take flight
I soar so high
I soar so high til I
til I
fall into the sun

Exhaustion is shaken from every line
Carved in my face by the hands of time
Youth and vitality come to life
Shadows are banished by blinding light

A chance to reinvigorate
My inner burning flame
And sleep will try to stay

And still I must wake!

Still I must

Wake and face the sunrise and live my life

The world outside will come to life

As I grow tired

And I

And I

I await the night

Await the night

Await the night

Await the night

Await the

Await the

Await the night

Await the night

Await the night